Our mind is unlimited in its potential to create whatever we desire. When we put our mind-power to work, the possibilities are endless.

There're no limits to what we can achieve, and absolutely no restrictions to how high we can propel ourselves in life.

Our prosperity is not essentially determined by our geographical location or the economy of the nation in which we live. What we become in life is largely determined by the content and quality of our mind, because with our mind we can change anything about ourselves: with it, we can establish a perfect structure and administration for our life, and enjoy to the utmost the special life God has given us.

However, for all of these to happen, we must know how to use our mind. In other words, the content and character of our mind must be rich and positive enough to pull toward us what we want.

Failure to use our mind rightly will only result in stagnation and retrogression, but if we want a transfiguration and transportation to the next level of glory and a higher and better quality of life, then we've got to learn to use your mind right.
